$1.00 PER YEAR.

New Wheat Now Being Marketed

The first new wheat of the 1920 crop was hauled in to the United Grain Growers elevator by Miss Jean McKay for and on account of J. C. Jensen. A. K. Anderberg followed with 125 bushels. All graded No. 1 Northern. This wheat was threshed by Tulloch & McKay and Hugh McIntosh, respectively. Total receipts for the first day, Aug. 25th., 500 bushels.

New wheat is coming to the local elevators quite regularly. Most of the grain is of an excellent, bright, hard sample and will make a milling wheat second to none. There is one thing about this particular district, and that is when the soil undertakes to produce grain it produces a grain that cannot be surpassed for quality.

We are very anxious to buy that oyster supper for Dad Damery, so we trust that all who can will thresh early and market their wheat as quickly as possible so that the calculations can be made in time for Christmas dinner.

M. Kyllingstead has leased the Jack Bowers house and is moving into town. He is driving the Rolling Prairie van route for the next school term.

Seriously Injured in Feeder Knives

Ed. Lacquement met with a serious accident this morning when he slipped when in the act of oiling his separator and had his right leg severely cut in the knives of the feeder. Exercising great presence of mind he pulled himself out of further danger, but it is little less than a miracle that he was not pulled into the cylinder and killed outright. On bringing him to town it was discovered that Dr. Walkey was out of town, having gone to Calgary last night, and none closer than Carmangay was available. Now that the wound has been dressed he is holding up as good as can be expected but recovery will be prolonged and painful. The machine was just started up this morning and threshing had only nicely been commenced when the accident happened.

WHEN THE PURE BLOOD PAYS

At an auction sale at Lulu Island Farms near Vancouver, B.C., recently, 30 grade Holsteins sold for an average price of $220, the lowest bringing $175 and the highest $235. There was only one purebred, the 7-year-old Princess Canary of Lulu, and she brought $525, thus outranking any two of her grade

STAY WITH THE GAME

Why emigrate, when others 'round about you
Are making gain while you are going back.
Debt, with its heavy load, might well confound you,
But, just shrug your shoulders—make them fit your pack.

New lands are conquered not without hard labor,
And many hearts are broken in the test.
Experience is the ONE, tho' costly teacher;
So learn from her and stay here with the rest.

Don't wallow blindly in the trough of failure—
Lift up your head and study those who win.
Throw out the errors that have cost you dearly;
Get out your plow and dig right in again.

The power to view the future is denied you;
But memory kindly blurs unpleasant past.
The God of Luck won't always be against you;
So stay and work and time will travel fast.

Some day in future years when times are different,
With contentment in the twilight your reward,
You'll find yourself in pleasant retrospection
Of when anticipation made life hard.

The above are our home-brewed sentiments. Should they be a source of inspiration to any of THE PRESS readers we shall entitle ourselves to a Sunday of quiet.

J. H. LAMB,
Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs.

The Chinese have a proverb: "Half an orange tastes as sweet as a whole one." It may be that it will bring some measure of contentment to us who are feeling the stress of the times if we take it to ourselves.

Sometimes it's just as much fun to take a little and see what we can make with it as it is to have much and see how quickly we can spend it. The results may be even more satisfying. Did you ever think of it in that way? We can develop all manner of resources which we have not realized we possess. We can feel the keen joy of having utilized our mental resources. The advantage is not only in the immediate present, but building for the future as well.

Somehow, of late years, there has grown up a false standard of pleasure. It must come to us ready-made—in clothing, homes, amusement features. We must be ministered to to be fortunate; we must sit back and let life bring her gifts and take them from her outstretched hands with critical eyes. If they fail to be exactly what we desire, we claim the immediate right to rebel and refuse.

Our ancestors were wiser. They loved the joy of battling with the elements, of taking the crude and unformed and working it into things of beauty. Their lives were fuller than ours, in a different way. We are using much of the real happiness of life if we do not bring into play the creative powers with which we all are endowed. It doesn't pay to disclaim them. To hear some of us underestimate ourselves in this direction is to regret the lost delights that we all might be sharing.

Miss Foster has given up her position as stenographer for the Standard Bank and left on Thursday for Calgary. Mr. Smith, the new bank junior, arrived this week from Paynton, Sask.

O. R. Olson and family, who have been living in Washington since last fall, arrived in Lomond today and are guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Williamson.

NOTES

Canadian sugar has been selling at 17c a pound in Detroit while at the same time canners at Hamilton, Ont., were paying 27c a pound in car load lots. Calgary sugar prices have come down a cent and a half during the last week. But, with a crop of 700,000 tons of sugar available for importation into the United States and Canada from Hawaii, J. B. Taylor of Honolulu, speaking recently at Winnipeg, anticipated no particular reduction in the price of sugar for the coming year.

Italy's wheat crop is forty per cent below the average this year, the crop in France is nearly one-third less than anticipated and actually required, the Argentine and India have an embargo on wheat exportations, thus an excellent export market is placed in front of the United States and Canadian grain growers. Without undue capitalistic manipulations the market should range around three dollars a bushel. Just at present there are no export demands and consequently market quotations have been very shaky.

We trust that the public will not consider us too capitalistic when we say that the railways are perfectly justified in making an application for an increase in freight rates. Whether or not the percentage they ask is justifiable, we will leave to the Board of Railway Commissioners. Operating charges have advanced with leaps and bounds and railway revenues must, if possible, keep in advance of the expenditures. A bankrupt railway would soon cease to be a public utility.

But we can't understand the declining price on beef cattle. The present condition does not react on T-bone steak. Beef cannot be profitably produced at the present Calgary market prices.

Turning to friend hen and her prospects, eggs are an exceptionally good price, and dressed poultry as well. One of the most paying propositions in sight is a flock of winter laying hens. According to the hen expert who was here during the summer it is mostly a problem of housing and providing the prospective layer with a properly balanced ration with plenty of forced exercise in the securing of the food. Think it over. Poultry raising can turn an unprofitable dull winter into a period of provident interest.

Last week the Bolshevik Reds were licking their chops in anticipation of devouring Poland, hook, sinker and all. It was then interesting to note the comment of Canadian daily papers over the folly of Poland's headstrong aggressive military policy. Now that the Poles have accomplished the seemingly impossible by rallying and cleaning out the Reds it is hard to anticipate the public's attitude.

By the way, the Bolshevik army could not have been so invulnerable or it would not have fallen before any forces

If we were a Lomond merchant we would invite the buying public to come a-shopping with their grip packed with the latest catalogue editions just issued through the mails. We know there is a certain sentiment prevalent that causes the shopper to hesitate to investigate the local stores for fear he must of necessity come away without buying and estrange himself with the local merchant. We will guarantee that the hide of the Lomond merchant is puncture proof in this respect. In these days of fluctuating prices it is not profitable to take anything for granted. This lack of frankness between the people and the local merchants is proving to be a heavy bill of expense to this and many other districts. When you get that little pile of cash ready to send away take your catalogue under your arm and come in and talk business with your storekeeper. If he loses a sale you can at least have an easy conscience.

It might surprise you to know that this is being done in Lomond quite frequently, to the eminent satisfaction of both buyer and seller. We are egotistical enough to believe that this is chiefly resultant from a series of articles run in THE Press last winter under the caption "Try in Lomond First."

Should you forget your own catalogue it might further surprise you to find that most of the merchants keep on hand the latest editions of these most popular family albums for just such occasions.

In the face of a number of petty juvenile thefts alleged to have been made around Lomond, THE Press has clipped the following article, taken from the pen of one of the world's greatest writers:

The Chinese, who are the most logical people on earth, have a comprehensive way of dealing out justice. When a crime is committed they not only punish the wrong-doer, but everyone who could, or should, have prevented it.

Thus, not long ago, in a report in a Shanghai newspaper of the court proceedings, there was an account of a crazy man, who had suddenly developed a homicidal mania and killed two people. The maniac was put in an asylum and every member of his family, even to remote cousins, and the entire population of the village in which he lived, were fined because they knew the man to be mentally unbalanced, yet had taken no measure to protect the public against him.

In another case a youth was convicted of having robbed his employer. He was sent to jail, and his father sentenced to a severe flogging for having reared a thief, and for having neglected to instill the principles of honor and honesty in his son.

We of the western world might well adopt this Chinese system of administering justice. For no man sins by himself alone, and we are all more or less responsible for the evil by those about us.

No one will deny, for example, that we are all accessory before the crime of the political corruption that curses our country. We pay taxes that should make every road in the state a velvet spread boulevard, and every city Spotless Town. Then we sit supinely down and watch road commissioners and aldermen steal millions, while we bump along over the ruts and un-mended highways, and have our children sicken and die of city filth.

We make our politicians grafters because we make it perfectly safe for them to loot the public treasury, and we are just as much their partners in guilt as is the servant girl who leaves the door unlocked so that burglars may come in and help themselves to the family silver.

We deserve to have to pay the taxes under which we groan. We deserve more. We deserve to serve a term in stripes by the side of the men we have encouraged in their thievery by our neglect of our duty as citizens. For we could prevent the plundering of the public funds if we would take the trouble to do so.

In domestic life the Chinese system of justice even more adequately makes the punishment fit the crime, and fastens the guilt on the real criminal. Because when a man or woman goes wrong, or falls in life, nine times out of ten he or she could truthfully say: "This is my parents' fault. They are to blame more than I."

I have never seen a boy standing in a felon's dock without thinking that his father and mother should be standing beside him, and that they are more responsible than he was.

They let him grow up with an ungoverned temper and in some moment of rage he committed murder. Or they never taught him to control his appetite, or deny himself anything he wanted, and so when he lacked the money to indulge himself in what he desired, he stole for it.

The father was absorbed in business. The mother in society or clubs, and they left the boy to grow up on the streets and learn his code of conduct from hoodlums. Neither father nor mother took the trouble to get acquainted with the boy, to be his friend and confidant and to instill in his youthful soul those high ideals of principle that keep a lad straight through the temptations of life, and so he became a criminal.

I never see a drab of the streets without thinking that it is her mother from whom we should draw away our skirts, and not her, poor soul. If her mother had inculcated modesty and purity in her, if her mother had taught her strength and virtue, and ingrained into the very fibre of her soul that feeling that makes a woman hold her chastity above her life, no man could have lured her into the primrose path; no want or poverty could have driven her to the streets.

But her mother was weak and careless, or she was frivolous and vain. She taught her daughter indirectly, if not directly, that dress was the most important thing in the world for a woman, and that she must have finery no matter how she got it, and so the girl was hardly to blame if she sold her soul for a yard of chiffon.

Or she let the girl go about half clothed and her modesty perished, for modesty can only exist when it is covered by the seven veils of reticence. Above all, the girl's mother never warned her that a woman is always in more danger from herself than she is from any man. And so the girl fell, her sin is on her mother's head.

I never see an unhappy home, or hear of a divorce that I do not think that the real co-respondents who should be named in the suit, are the parents on both sides. They have brought their children up to be selfish, with no idea of owing a duty to anyone but themselves and when they find out that matrimony consists of more bills than billings, more cooking than cooing, they have not the courage to endure the sacrifices it demands.

If daughters would prepare their daughters for wife-hood by teaching them to be thrifty managers and good housekeepers, and that marriage means a woman buckling to and doing her duty, no matter how hard it may be in the estate unto which she has called herself; and if fathers would teach their sons that it is a solemn thing for a man to take a girl's life into his hands, and that he doesn't fulfill all his obligations to her just by feeding and clothing her, but that he must do all in his power to really make her happy, why marriage would cease to be a failure. It is the parents who wreck their children's domestic happiness by not fitting them to be good husbands and wives.

And it is the parents who are responsible for the failures and poor weaklings who have not the grit to stand up and fight the battle of life, and so are conquered by fate. Mother and father couldn't bear to see Johnny and Mary work and so they let them grow up to become lazy loafers. Mother and father hadn't the heart to hear Johnny and Mary cry, and so they let them develop into soft cowards who gave up in the face of every difficulty, and became parasites that hung onto the strong instead of standing on their own feet. And Johnny and Mary have the right to curse mother and father for what they are.

We are all partners in guilt when things go wrong, and we may well pray, as did the little priest whenever he heard of anyone committing a crime: "May God forgive you and me for that man's sin."

New Century Threshers

FOUR SIZES
All Standard

The Thresher That Sends All The Grain Into The Bag

MILLIONS of dollars are wasted in threshing each year in the form of grain which is fed into the separator but never reaches the bag—grain that works through to the stacker and is blown out with the straw. This is a necessary evil with the old vibrator type of thresher—but not with the Aultman-Taylor New Century.

The Aultman-Taylor New Century Thresher, equipped with the Universal Rotary Straw Rack device and Inclined Open Web, stop this loss. They thresh and save all the grain.

Universal Rotary Rack

The Universal Rotary Rack positively gets all the grain out of the straw. Its rotary action gives it double the agitation of the vibrating rack, hence double separating capacity. It moves the straw rearward in a continuous thin stream, insuring perfect separation and greater capacity. And at the same time, it saves power and stops vibration.

Four Sizes—All Standard

Aultman-Taylor Threshers are made in four sizes, all absolutely standard in design and construction. The sole difference between the largest and smallest New Century Thresher is one of size only. Our two smaller threshers are the ideal size for individual use with the small tractor.

We will be glad to give you any further information along this line at any time. Come in and talk it over with us now.
